

Human Sciences Encounters in Phnom-Penh: Researchers Profiles:WORK Courtney

Courtney Work is a PhD Candidate, Anthropology at Cornell University. She received my Master's Degree from Brandies University in Anthropology and Gender Studies. Her thesis examined violent masculine performance at Cambodian dance parties. Her current research project is village centered. She is asking questions about Buddhism and contemporary religious practice and also looking into the political and economic structures of village life in early twenty-first century Cambodia.